time's arrow

from Ad Patream

And you my juvenile verses and amusements, if only you have hope for immortality and a life and a glimpse of the light beyond your master's funeral pyre, and if dark oblivion does not sweep you down into the throngs of Hades, perhaps you will preserve this eulogy and the name of the father who my song honors as an example to remote ages.
J. Milton

A word is dead
When it is said,
Some say.

I say it just Begins to live
That day.
E. Dickinson

a body back and forth   Lou Schmidt's story—his matter runs hot and cold   night and day he don't wanna go   he don't wanna stay die or come true   warm color red   cool color blue
